Here's best answer I found on quora for eye color, which I copy and paste below:

Brown eyes protect the retina from harmful uv-light, much the same as dark skin protects you from skin cancer in sunny climes. However, this comes at a price,=the melanin blocks some visible spectrum light from entering the eye too; =particularly light towards the blue end of the spectrum. This means it is harder to see at night, as it means you cannot see the predominant wavelengths of the visible spectrum that are still shining, at say twilight. In areas where in winter it may be night for 12 hours a day or longer, good night vision is crucial, and uv protection less so - hence scandinavia is famous for blue eyes.
