- (4) because ultimately I have =o live with myself and Nancy and I have to feel we were a team in this =very important).

at this point, it =ppears that the firestorm is subsiding somewhat, and maybe even a =ot. It also appears that the haters may have exhausted themselves =ith yelling and other people are actually getting turned off and =eginning to counter them, angrily and otherwise.. as often =appens the debate ends up coming down in the middle somewhere after the =xtremists have vocalized their views.. so there is some argument for =etting the twitter sphere just exhaust itself and move on to the next thing. Indeed if I am interested in simply covering my ass and leaving alive with my tail between my legs, this may be the best approach.

But it is equally true that many many many of the people vocalizing support have all said that while most of the story is hearsay allegations, and none in any case involve sexual harassment, they are also saying that Lawrence Krauss has not had a chance, yet, to defend himself. And exactly what I do in the future will depend on this. I expect you will say that this is true, but you will argue that my future will be better off if I do nothing.. but I cannot see not responding and I believe, based on what we are seeing, that waiting much longer is strategically wrong.

Finally..

(5).. and wait for it.. because this is going to make you really want to yell at me, if we want to further silence Buzzfeed following up this, and maybe others as well, we may need to initiate a lawsuit (and against Gizmodo in australia, where basically anyone can sue and win).

So.. I am not acting rashly.. I am initiating this discussion with you. Thinking rationally and calmly about exactly how to navigate this tightrope.. So.. we can have a conversation later. In the meantime Nancy and I are at least going to go over the letter to try and tune it and wait for Adam's revision so we are prepared to act if we decide to.
