Thanks again Jeffrey.. There are many good points here, and we will adopt many of them. Re buzzfeed.. They will do another article if they can, whatever I do.. I am sure they are chomping at the bit to write an article saying 'since our original article many few people have come forward with allegations'.. and whatever I write will not affect that. You are right it cannot be poor me.. will try and reduce that.. and also try and incorporate more strongly that none of this is harassment.. I say it at the end of the piece, but it is probably too late.. I don't think I can or should use the alien argument here, because that really seems like I am putting accusers down.. lumping them with alien abduction people would look like I was attacking and demeaning them.

I will mea culpa more explicitly.. Next version this afternoon.

p.s. as you may have heard, MIT press has cancelled the book contract Noam and I had with them.

their past travails. I would like to give them the benefit of the doubt. Why would a woman come forward if it were not true? I recognize the dilemma. Robin said it didn't happen. Who is to be believed? The accuser or my friend. Not a simple choice. Did I expose myself? No. Physically abuse someone, in a public place. The climate is dangerous to defend oneself from false accusations. The balance of respect and dismissal. The "I choose to believe" is the basis of religious freedom, and one I support. Our system of due process, innocent until proven guilty, is and must be the way of society.

While waiting to get your revisions Adam, we have done a little more editing and re-arranging, especially to the first two pages, and to the last page. We really would like to get this finalized on the next day or so if possible. We think that other than tightening language in the middle to reduce length, no other significant changes are required.
