I believe we are starting that, but they come as needed. I will discuss with Linda. The things Arnie does (Dressing and lifting him, etc – hospice doesn't do. So, we need both Arnie and hospice, which I believe we have now, or starting needed. I will confirm. No worries, we'll get him what he needs.

thanks MB. I am talking to ARnie about round the clock care. He can't do 24/7, but will do as close to that as possible. He just needs a few hours break to recharge himself. Warren is basically needs full attention.

I commented earlier that I believe his condition is very fragile and he can die at any point; I would be surprised if he lasts 3 weeks; (note I have not SEEN him in 10 months). Linda has lost it but since WARREN requested he die at home I think it would be best if Linda has the proper supports and he stays at home. I talk to her daily and I think she will get why; she will collapse emotionally once he does die irrespective if it is in his home or at a facility. As long as she knows we are supporting her I think it can be done. Years from now there won't be any guilt he didn't carry out his last wishes. There is no getting around the profound sadness of this miserable death.

Michael,

With your experience how much longer do you think he has? Also, =s this progresses do you think he will reach a point where he is no =onger aware of his surroundings? If so, at that point it might be =est for Linda's sake to move him to a care =facility.

I agree, lets try to keep him at home. His dignity is shot and =is situation is irrevsersable. Let him stay in his own bed and =ass in peace. This is still so surreal to =e.

Very generous of you . =e probably should be in a facility but he wanted to die at home. I'm =oping with basic 24 hour/around the clock assistance; the hospice =eam as needed, and my talking to her Linda will get through it. If =t becomes intolerable and he is truly out of it I'm sure he can be =oved. For now lets try to follow his =equest.
