Just got out of a meeting where we all discussed what would look best and they agreed with me.

My strong opinion is it should be leather-

The only thing that could bag the edge is the seat - leather to leather. If you are worried about banging, the leather to leather would protect the seat better than a hard, unforgiving material like wood or metal.

It will coordinate with the conference table detail

Metal in that area will be too much. You already have 2 metal cup holders and metal switches. More metal will turn a detail accent into a focal point.

Matching the hardwood (color and grain) that run length is going to look a bit piece meal.=/span>

I really believe that the detail in the leather to coordinate with the conference table is the way to go...=

The attached drawing illustrates the look=that will allow us to keep the seats as is and gains you 2" of aisle

I think it will look great and compliment the new conf=rence table detail.
