they were not asking for a comment as you told me. they were asking to SPEAK. taking advice from nancy or your waitress neither has any experience in his arena it is like asking your wife to look at your x-ray and give you her opinion on whether you need a stent. this is dangerous. if female students read it the wrong way. . and five decide to tell a story that they were fearful of bringing their past complaints BLAH =LAH BLAH, we have trouble. . if you make a positive bullshit statement, some women might feel you are ignoring them ! , if you choose not to speak, it must be done very respectfully, its the same story i gave you the last. time. when your main trust said there is a deadline you must respond. It was your responses that got your events canceled. . it made the story.

This is the student paper at ASU. I am assuming = should give no statement but just checking for your advice. (See last =roposal, which is growing on me )

Asu has already made a statement =lready pointing out that there have been no complaints of sexual =arassment against me by faculty staff or students at =SU.

I =ould reiterate that and add that I have never been accused or =ound in violation of sexual harassment codes at any institution I have =een affiliated with.

Or I could just reiterate ASU's statement and say =omething positive like I am very proud to be working at ASU, it is the =ost exciting university i have been affiliated with and thrilled to =ead the fantastic team at origins project, one of the most exciting =ograms st any university in the world, and be working with great =olleagues and students in physics and SESE.

I am leaning toward the latter.
