i do -- (thats a dangerous expression) format id=as. should there be a question to answer , or a problem that the group =should focus on? , physics needs no defending to me, however, my point was =hat seperate from at the moment explanations of the currently unknown, few=of the participants or world at large would directly benefit , unlike a s=ntthetic intelligent machine that could search solution spaces rather than d=ta bases , for medical problems /

hi there it was very interesting to talk last week seriously you genui=ely had different things to say than most others i'd talked to and i e=joyed it.
perhaps however i should have defended physics a little more= it is more difficult to convey the excitement of some of what we do and it=is true we are working the edges more but sometimes those edges can open u= whole new worlds-literally and of thought.

as for the new fields =elow i can see how they can make for exciting discussions and why one woul= want to be an intellectual tourist for them. the subjects are more access=ble but in many cases harder to pin down-both the goals and the key new de=lopments. but they clearly will make for some fascinating back and forth =nd it sounds pretty funr. btw i find the interchangeability of aspects and=participants of 3 and 4 noteworthy.

Hi Jeffrey

Thanks for the advice. Good talking to=you.

Two things I should have asked: What do you think of H=rvard's financial situation and how long before they are o=t of it?

Where will physics be? I sense it's not such a pr=ority now.

Second, I do want to follow up on the bad physicist thing. I let y=u slip out nicely but really -where is that coming from? I hav= a pretty solid track record-can't be my collaborator ever= time-

First more relevant I guess but second could be relevant if I'= isolated and need to attract people or resources. So let me k=ow if you have another minute free-Lisa
