Schjetnan is excellent in terms of reforesting and restoring vegetation but I agree his design is very old fashioned. I'm not so concerned about that part because we would be directing him designwise.

The other Firm I approached is ENEA and they are much more actual in their design, which I really like. I'm not so familiar with their expertise reforesting large parcels but I am positive they could be an excellent choice too; however, their fees will be considerably higher in the long run.

For this conceptual stage both quoted the exact same number so we can go with whoever you feel more adequate. I'm comfortable with either one and both are ready to start immediately.
Go to <http://www.enea.ch/> and let me know what you think.
