my issues with you have always been my contention that your expectations are unrealistic.. that you expect to receive compensation out of line with your experience and focus. you expect to succeed without the necessary work. and you focus on your needs as opposed to the work you are supposed to be doing. I have been unable to explain the way the real world works. Your comment that for 75k you can't live. (Jason business, only sets you up to continue to struggle. I assisted with your trip to California so that you could reflect on how the fuck you got to this place at your age. And what I hear is unfortunately more of the same, chocolate sauce, publishing books, only things that have resulted in failure over and over again,, how many more times do you have to see examples before you change your strategy

I am in a meeting now with the designer for the house, this didn't have to become a stressful scenario Jeffrey, I'd hoped that in the last ten years I'd shown you the strength of my loyalty and that you would know better that my intention is always good towards you, always true.

I pursued Robert diligently and corresponded with you simply on what I knew not with the intention of holding you up. Not at all. see forwarded email.
