This place is a design studio in Chicago. They are going to put together an email for me with types of wood slabs they have available right now, design options, basic pricing, etc. They can do any sort of base we would want, be it wooden base, or metal treated for outdoor use(which she recommended due to the possibly of the wood base being more susceptible to rot if it's going to be left outside with the legs potentially sitting in water) I like the design of the one in this link.

Do you know how long you want the table? I know you said only 2 feet wide, but approx. how long do you want it; 7 feet? One of the people I spoke with thought 2 feet would be too narrow to allow enough space for a proper place setting on both sides and to be able to have anything on the table between. They think 3 feet would be a better width.

This place is also promising.. getting info from them as well
