Walk like an Egyptian, take a Roman holiday or hit Broadway

We're rounding up our Condé Nast Traveller Gold List collection this week with an Egyptian treasure: the Mena House Oberoi, overlooking the pyramids in Cairo (you'll be able to see them from your bedroom window thanks to the guaranteed upgrade we've arranged). If you'd rather have a Roman holiday than walk like an Egyptian, we've got the delicious, tiny Gigli d'Oro Suite, tucked away on a cobbled street between Piazza Navona and the Tiber. And if your ambitions tend more towards Broadway, no problem - the Hudson is this week's Style Steal, an haute New York hotel at a rock bottom price.

It may be mere steps away from tourist draw Piazza Navona, but Gigli d'Oro is a world apart from your typical Rome hotel experience. Until recently home to a Roman aristocrat, on a cobbled residential street, the building has been thoughtfully and ingeniously converted into six exquisite suites. Modern touches such as eye-tricking "floating" beds and airy white sofas are combined with original features like beamed ceilings and chunky stone doorways. Service is impeccable and thorough; and with so few other people there to enjoy it, it's not hard to channel the blue-blooded roots of its former owner.

Almost absurdly close - 765 yards! - to the Great Pyramids of Giza sits the Mena House Oberoi, a former palace with 40 acres of fragrant gardens. Gaze up at one of the seven wonders of the ancient world as you relax in the hotel's manicured gardens. Go visit the pyramids up close on a camel, then return to the Mena House Oberoi for a dinner fit for a pharaoh.

Worlds away from the tourist-filled blocks of Midtown Manhattan, the Thompson LES is a glamorous ode to the Lower East Side. Haute, modern design sets this property apart, with sexy lighting, sleek decor and head-turning details, from the hip lobby to the monochrome guestrooms. With a happening restaurant, terrace bar and outdoor swimming pool, the Thompson LES is a great portal into New York's downtown scene.

Synonymous with sleek and stylish design and renowned for its knack of pairing industrial chic with high-end luxury, Thompson Hotels has injected its winning formula into London's poshest neighborhood with the opening of its first European outpost, Belgraves. Jetsetter was first through the doors of this 85-room boutique bolthole and can report that it looks set to attract a cool crowd with its hip lounge bar, collaboration with top British chef, Mark Hix, and plush rooms and suites with stellar views of the capital's skyline.

Hidden in Marrakech's maze-like medina, Riyad el Mezouar is an opulent hotel that was fully revamped by interior designer Michel Durand-Meyrier in 2000. Housed in a 17th-century former palace, it has a home-from-home appeal, with a huge roof terrace, garden courtyard and Romanesque swimming pool - all welcome escapes after a day in the chaotic medina.
