Dear Noam,

I had a =productive call with Max today. Richard joined in shortly after =he call started. My primary goal for the call was to ascertain =hether Max is willing to resign. He is, and he understands that =e has no role in the appointment of his successor. This is =arry's role, and you must approve the appointment.

I made it =lear to Max that you wish for Richard to succeed him as the independent =rustee. Max indicated that Harry is somewhat concerned about this =uccession plan at the present time. We left it that I would speak =ith Harry about the succession issue and I hope to be able to overcome =is objections to Richard. I plan to reach out to Harry via email =omorrow to introduce myself. I will set up a call with him for =early next week, hopefully on Monday. I will keep you posted =egarding the call.

We also discussed distributions, the exercise of discretion to distribute trust principal, and the extent of the financial information that Max requires. Max and I have a clear disagreement regarding his obligations to gather detailed personal financial information from you. I have research on this issue that you will find to be of interest and I will forward it to you once I have finalized the memo. The distributions issue should be moot once Richard (hopefully) comes on board, as he will require an appropriate level of personal financial information from you.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Best,
Deborah
