Jeffrey,

I've been unable to fly the Boeing since we arrived Monday in London, the Fog is the worse than I've ever seen for two straight days. its been=20 constant 100 foot ceiling with 1/8 to 0 visibility. I have run the engines, updated my FMS data bases, all systems operate normal and everything is ready for flight. We are getting a forecast of=20 1500 broken tomorrow at 1pm for Stansted UK, and should be fine for test=20 flight, I spoke to Ben Sharizi from the Toy Store, Ben and Morris purchased=a very large FBO and hanger in Stansted just outside of London, they can store the Boeing in the hanger when the snow starts,,snow is expected as=20 early as Sunday (lite snow). Ben has agreed to $200 per day outside parking= which is same price I'm paying in Lasham UK, plus Stansted has ILS appr=ach and full FBO, Lasham does not have instrument approach. At Lasham has a radar=20 surveillance type of approach, the controller attempts to talk you down with his voice commands, while he steers you while looking at his rada= screen. not to effective when weather is Low IFR,.

Do you approve of me to re-positioning the=B727 to Stansted? park at theToy Store's FBO and get possible hanger storage=if temperatures drop below freezing?

, they mentioned he would show the aircraft to potential buyers... . <=div>

today's Fog photo, this is N908JE

thank you,
Larry
