Taymor To Direct 'Midsummer' As Inaugural Show For Theater' = New Home

By Patrick Healy

The Tony Award-winning director

will return to the New York stage in October with a production of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" to open the new Brooklyn home of Theater for a New Audience, an Off Broadway company where Ms. Taymor has regularly worked since its founding in 1979. "Midsummer" will be Ms. Taymor's first show since her high-profile firing from the Broadway musical "Spider-Man: Turn Off the Dark" in 2011 by its producers, with whom she is still in a legal battle over back pay, royalty and copyright protection.

In a telephone interview on Wednesday, Ms. Taymor said she chose "Midsummer" as the theater's inaugural production because of the play's celebratory nature: Characters fall in love, reunite after spats and wed, and others put on a play themselves.

A celebrated downtown theater director and puppet-maker before finding fame and fortune directing the blockbuster musical "The Lion King," Ms. Taymor said she was still thinking over concepts for staging "Midsummer" and did not know yet if she would be designing puppets or masks for the show. As for the "Midsummer" budget, she said she did not know how much the production would cost, but added that it would be "typical" for Off Broadway and noted that Theater for a New Audience "never does big budgets."

"Spider-Man" attracted international headlines for, among other things, its $75 million budget, more than twice as much money as any Broadway show in history.

Ms. Taymor said she was talking over ideas for "Midsummer" with Es Devlin, the British set and costume designer who is known for big-budget spectacles like the closing ceremony for the London Olympic Games last summer.

"Midsummer" will not be set in any particular time or period, "but rather in its own world," Ms. Taymor said. She did say that she may include children and teenagers in the cast, after recently holding a workshop of the play with children to play with their energy and physicality and to think about raw elemental energy." Ms. Taymor's long-time partner, Elliot Goldenthal, will compose original music for "Midsummer."

◆=80◆There is a visceral nature to the theater, and I want to have that in t=e production," said Ms. Taymor, who has never directed a "M=dsummer" before. She was a designer on the play in 1984 when Theate= for a New Audience did a children's version – her first co=laboration with the company and its artistic director, Jeffrey Horowitz, wh= is now a close friend.

The play will begin performances on Oct. 19 i= the theater's new 299-seat main stage space, which has been design=d by architect Hugh Hardy. Opening night is set for Nov. 2.

Asked if=her return to New York theater was any more special because of her experien=es on "Spider-Man," Ms. Taymor simply said that she was loo=ing forward to working on the play.

"Spider-Man" bec=me the most talked-about Broadway show in many years because of a nightmare=E2◆◆s-worth of creative and technical delays, cast injuries, and offsta=e showdowns between Ms. Taymor and her composers – Bono and the Edg= of U2 – and the show's producers.

Bono, Edge, and t=e producers ultimately replaced Ms. Taymor as the show's director a=ter more than three months of preview performances during the winter of 201=. The producers contended that she resisted their pleas to revamp "=spider-Man" into a more family-friendly musical (thereby possibly se=ling more tickets and recovering its high costs), while Ms.Taymor said the p=oducers refused to support her requests and ideas for changes in the script=and the score.

"Spider-Man" opened in June 2011 to m=stly negative reviews but has gone on to become a popular show with tourist=, although ticket sales have cooled a bit in recent months.

Ms. Taym=r sued the producers in federal court in late 2011, saying they were profit=ng from her "Spider-Man" script and staging and owed her mo=e than $1 million in back pay and royalties; they counter sued, arguing tha= she had been fired for breach of contract. The judge in the case announced=last August that the two sides had reached a settlement agreement in princi=le, but since then the sides =ave not been able to come to terms <<http://artsbeat.blogs.nytimes.com/2012/10/30/settlement-talks-continue=in-court-battle-over-spider-man-musical/>> .

The specifics of their ongoing differences have never been discl=sed; Ms. Taymor declined to comment on Wednesday about the issues holding u= a settlement, but said that a negotiated resolution was "looking g=od."

"I'm hoping that we're going ha=e a good outcome very soon," she said.

A version of this article appeared in print on=01/24/2013, on page C3 of the New York edition with the headline: Taymor to=Direct 'A Midsummer Night's Dream'.

Since being fired in 2011 from the Broadway musical " Spider-Man <http://www.latimes.com/topic/entertainment/movies/spider-man-%28=ictional-character%29-PEFCC000006.topic> : Turn Off the Dark," director Julie Taymor <http://www.latimes.com/topic/entertainment/julie-t=ymor-PECLB003827.topic> has kept a relatively low public profile, her time presumably occupied by the ongoing lawsuit between her and the=show's producers.

Taymor might be considered damaged goods when it comes to Broadway, but her trademark innovative style still has its fans. In her first directing gig since the "Spider-Man" <http://www.latimes.com/to=ic/entertainment/movies/spider-man-%28movie%29-ENMV00010402.topic> debacle, Taymor will return to her roots by staging a new production of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at Theatre for a New Audience in=Brooklyn.

The production is scheduled to open Nov. 2 and will be the=inaugural production of the company's new permanent home near Brooklyn's </=pan> <http://www.latimes.com/topic/us/new-york/new-york-city/brooklyn-%28new-york-city%29/fort-greene-PLGEO100100802012900.topic> Titus Andronicus <http://www.latimes.com/topic/entertainment/music/tit=s-andronicus-%28music-group%29-PECLB0000013288.topic> ="

The director has also made film versions of "The Tempest" and "Titus."

"Midsummer" is set to begin preview performances on Oct. 19.

Taymor reached a tentative settlement in her legal battle with the producers of "Spider-Man" in August. But it=has been reported as recently as this month that no final deal has been reached yet.

Taymor left the notorious – but still ongoing – mega-musical in March 2011=after producers demanded a major overhaul following a difficult four-month preview period. She has not worked in theatre since and remains locked in a legal battle over royalties and copyright.

However, this autumn she will reunite with her longtime collaborator, the composer Elliot Goldenthal, to mount an off-Broadway production of A Midsummer Night's Dream, entitled simply Midsummer, to open a new theatre in New York on 19 October.

Julie Taymor has settled on "A Midsummer Night's Dream" as the play she'll helm to inaugurate the new Brooklyn home base of Theater for a New Audience this fall.

The Off Broadway production "Midsummer" will be Taymor's first gig for the Gotham stage since her high-profile stint as helmer of Broadway's "Spider-Man: Turn Off the Dark," followed by her subsequent messy divorce from that project.

For several months Taymor has been on tap to launch the soon-to-be-completed TFANA building in Fort Green, Brooklyn, but it hadn't yet been decided which Bard play she'd choose to direct. Taymor ("The Lion King") has long been associated with TFANA, beginning with a 1986 staging of "The Tempest" and followed by "The Taming of the Shrew," "Titus Andronicus" and "The Green Bird," a 1996 staging of a Carlo Gozzi play that moved to Broadway in 2000.

TFANA's new building -- the first permanent home for the troupe, which was founded in 1979 -- will include a 299-seat mainstage and a 50-seat second space.

Casting and other details for "Midsummer" have yet to set, but previews begin Oct. 19 ahead of a Nov. 2 opening.

Julie Taymor and Elliot Goldenthal Will Conjure Midsummer Night's Dream in TFANA's New Brooklyn Home

By Kenneth Jones

Tony Award winner Julie Taymor <http://www.playbillvault.com/Person/Detail/6737/Julie-Taymor> (The Lion King <http://www.playbillvault.com>Show/Detail/8729/The-Lion-King>) will direct and longtime collaborator Elliot Goldenthal <http://www.playbillvault.com/Person/Detail/6085/Elliot-Goldenthal> (a href="http://www.playbillvault.com>Show/Detail/3477/The-Green-Bird">The Green Bird) will compose original music for a new fall 2013 production of William Shakespeare <http://www.playbillvault.com/Person/Detail/739/William-Shakespeare>'s A Midsummer Night's Dream, to be the inaugural production in Theatre for a New Audience <http://www.playbillvault.com/Person/Detail/116471/Theatre-for-a-New-Audience>'s new permanent home in the Downtown Brooklyn Cultural District.

TFANA announced the news on Jan. 23. It had been known that Taymor would direct a classic for the not-for-profit's new home. Shakespeare's romantic comedy-fantasy is set in the woods outside of Athens, where sprites and fairies meddle with the affairs of men and women.

If history teaches us anything, this summer should be visually potent: In 1998, Taymor became the first woman to win the Tony Award for Best Direction of a Musical - and also won a Tony for Best Costumes - for her production of The Lion King acknowledged as a masterstroke of design, direction, movement and mask work.

For Broadway's Spider-Man: Turn Off the Dark <http://www.playbillvault.com>Show/Detail/13708/Spider-Man-Turn-Off-the-Dark>, Taymor served as director, co-book writer and mask-designer.

TFANA founding artistic director Jeffrey Horowitz said in a statement, "Julie and Elliot are bold innovative, adventurous artists. We first worked together in 1984 on a 60-minute version for Theatre for a New Audience's A Midsummer Night's Dream presented at the Public Theater. Twenty-nine years later, it's thrilling they are directing and composing the first full production of A Midsummer Night's Dream we are mounting as the inaugural presentation in our first permanent home."

According to TFANA, in 1986, Horowitz invited Taymor to stage The Taming of the Shrew, Titus Andronicus and in 1996, Carlo Gozzi <http://www.playbillvault.com/Person/Detail/12992/Carlo-Gozzi>'s The Green Bird, which transferred to Broadway in 2000.

Composer Goldenthal creates works for orchestra, theater, opera, ballet and film (including Taymor's films "The Tempest," "Titus" and "Frida." In 2003, he was honored with the Academy Award and a Golden Globe Award for the score to "Frida."

Theatre for a New Audience's first permanent home is designed by world-renowned architect Hugh Hardy and H3 Hardy Collaboration Architecture. It includes the Samuel H. Scripps Mainstage (299 seats) and the Theodore C. Rogers Studio (50 seats).

The Samuel H. Scripps Mainstage, the first stage built for Shakespeare and classic drama in New York City since Lincoln Center's 1965 Vivian Beaumont, is inspired by the Royal National Theatre's Cottesloe. According to TFANA, "It is a uniquely flexible space which combines an Elizabethan courtyard theatre with modern technology. The relationship between the stage and audience can be shaped for each production into different configurations."

Since its founding in 1979, Theatre for a New Audience has played in more than 20 different venues across Manhattan and Brooklyn.

Theatre for a New Audience is near the BAM Peter Jay Sharp Building, Harvey Theater and Fisher Building as well as the Mark Morris <http://www.playbillvault.com/Person/Detail/4838/Mark=Morris>
