B did 4 hours of work w=th Bill yesterday morning. He rested the afternoon but then insisted on go=ng out for dinner (!!)
and then got a migraine and left within a few minut=s.

I just don't think it is wise for him to be up and pushing it so hard. It m=kes no sense to me why he goes full court press on diagnosis and treatment=but will have suboptimal results due to compliance. It's not like this is =ust a finger. It's his vision. Geez.

Anyway, Sam continues to be whiny and emotional and I think driving Boris t= get up and out more.

Docs have told him to not look up or put his head in certain positions but =hen you are out about you can't control these things because of the reflex=s connected to your nexk muscles. Your eyes move reflexively, like when yo= look down to walk down stairs your eyes are actually looking up. You get =t....voluntary control of eye movements is "easier" when you aren't moving=around so much. He thinks I am nagging at him.

He showed me the retinal and vascular imaging which I only have a rudimenta=y understanding - just the vascular side. I don't look at a lot of retinal=images. Anyway, his macula is pretty much gone on the R. Maybe that is why=he's kind of given up (or feels that way to me) since peripheral vision re=turning is just so so, and also not even guaranteed.
Contribution to binocu=ar vision with just periphery is pretty minimal. And virtually no contribu=ion to depth since it screws with accomodation reflex to not see centrally=

Sam will be going to NYC next weekend.

Mette is coming in about 2.5 weeks.

That's the report for the past 24 hours from the Land of Boris.
