Subject: Information Security & our advisory relationship

Hey Jeffrey,

As part of my normal onboarding process for all clients I do a normal risk assessment related to information security and my team has identified a number of risks associated to working with you. Part of this is related to your history of having files discovered in investigations. We practice complete infosec procedures where all discussions and work product are guaranteed to be secure against any prying eyes. My team is not confident our infosec arrangements can guarantee me that.

Before we work further I'd like to send a team of my InfoSec experts to train your staff and setup a secure encrypted means of us communicating - is this something you and your security team would be comfortable with?

This training could also include your other communications and benefit you infosec as a whole.

Best,

Austin
