See e-mail below from Steve. While Steve asked that I call you, I am growing more and more concerned about where this path is leading us. A= least, e-mails provide a record of what is communicated. There is a total breakdown in communications=20 between Steve and David. See below, where Steve notes the many times h= has given David the budgets that David is again requesting. As you =know, in response to David saying the lenders want a list of suppliers, Steve has asked for copies of the e-mail from the lender or its servicers requesting such list. The requested transmittal was not received. If it does not exist, just tell me.

Turning to the bigger issue; please give me your insights into how we (you and I) can build trust and cooperation between Steve and David. My experience is that when the principals focus on their differences, business fail.

As you can see, there was no request for the names o= your suppliers. How do you wish to respond?
