Thanks. Am pretty sure asu legal will not send anything. Their position is that legally they don't have to and this would undercut that.

I had thought of calling him and appearing surprised by the request and asking what sexual misconduct was referenced as there is nothing at uni and then if he referenced this to sort of laugh and say, oh that was dismissed because it was clearly just a third party trying to make trouble but it was shown to never have happened etc

Then I thought maybe best to not do anything because if they don't have access to the info and they are interested in a story of how Ino responds to this stuff they might not have a story.

I think the reporter should have the ANU doc. with a cover letter. . if ASU legal will send it that would be the best. however, there is a chance that the reporter will quote and take out of context. . My concern is that if you speak even off the record to the reporter that it will raise the bar. . 1 you can get out in front and have someone else publish the letter. ? = there are no perfect answers. . you sound so wounded that unless you can truly keep it under control. a phone conversation with the reporter might throw more oil on the non fire. :)/ = you have a lawyer or publicist. or someone at the university that could have the off the record?

Exactly what nancy said. So should I speak to the reporter?

What I find most important is that in original complaint it says a complaint was lodged at the time with the conference organizers. Then in the final report it concludes no such complaint was lodged. Indicating a lie.

So you can see what I am up against. If/when Buzzfeed does something about this case that has been discredited by now 2 universities (with clear misstatements in the claim that were later shown to be false), you suggest I simply do nothing? If not, please advise. Also, whether I should be proactive at all in terms of threat of legal action etc... Thanks for your help.

Dr. Krauss,

My apology for attaching the incorrect email to my prior message. This thread has the correct public record request. As to your recent question, you will see that BuzzFeed is also asking about your individual funding. I have information from OKED. If you have additional information, can you please provide it to our office – in addition to the funding information for The Origins Project. Thank you.
