Dear David,

We've had a lot of work done for the Hercules and received very good feedback from our customers, some of whom are expected to get back to me upon returning after the summer, a common response in June and July.

Three customers (including museums) have had difficulty accepting the price because Christie's was shopping it around for considerably less than the low estimate. However, a museum got back to me today with a serious interest and will be visiting in July with the director to see the piece in person. As I am sure you know, we continue to work hard on your beautiful Hercules and the boys, trying to find them new homes.

Wishing you and your family all the the best,

Hicham
