Don, to say I am at a =oss to understand why, more than seven months after this process began, th=s aircraft is still not on Jet's Part 135 certificate is the understatement of the day. Jet has provided us a myriad of reaso=s, starting with other planes in the queue ahead of this one, to the gover=ment shutdown, to the loss of personnel in the office of the TEB FSDO, to =he holidays, but all I know is that during this same period we have managed to get other aircraft Part 135 cer=ified in 6 – 8 weeks.

</=pan>

Most recently, the rep=rts from Jet personnel have been that the aircraft would be on Jet's=certificate by the 10th of January, then by the end of January, then by the middle of February and most recently by Feb. 24 (t=is last date allegedly coming directly from you). And here we are on=Feb. 27 in no different a position than we were in July.

</=pan>

What's going on =ere?

Thanks for the comment=. I will forward them off to our contracts department for their revi=w.

</=pan>

Realistically I would =hink that we could have the aircraft on the Part 135 certificate by the en= of the third quarter. Possibly slightly sooner but a lot of this ha= to do with how quickly the FAA will respond.

Mike,

</=pan>

Attached please find o=r comments to the Dry Lease Agreement and the Management Agreement --clean and marked versions are attached.

</=pan>

Please review and let =s know if you have any questions or if you would like to discuss.

</=pan>

Also, can you let us k=ow how long it will take to have the aircraft listed on Jet Aviation&rsquo=s Part 135 certificate?

</=pan>

Best regards,

Brian
