no, not doing as you promise makes it impossible . for me or most people to trust you . and even in the face of that warning you persist . ♦=A0 friendships cannot withstand your willingness to not do as you say, over and over and then steal. , try to cover it up from someone who you have asked for help. . take money for one thing and then do another with it. and lie about it, ask for help , that clearly came with responsibility to do as you promise. and then not do it and merely ask for more

I didn't want money to be the only tie between us. Sending you my list expenses with no other form of communication would make me feel sick. I tried. I did track my money as you told me, I did know it was about to end (even by being extremely careful about it) but I wanted to see how long I could keep going by myself without asking for your help.
