Yes. =un. :-) Thanks for coming.

Good to see George too. =e's smart and has been in this field longer than me. I need to get =ore advice from him about handling my students and post docs I =hink.

Good point about =ontrol.

I think one thing is for us to set up = not profit to which I can eject myself and the good people if I decide =o bail or if I get kicked out.

I think it =hould/could be designed like the Broad.

Eric =ander is a friend and I'm talking to him about how he's structured =he Broad. It is a non-profit with an affiliation with Harvard and MIT. =either of them really love the Broad, but it is able to raise funds =ndependently, have its own building and bring in faculty and students =rom both Harvard and MIT. Lander is the only faculty member on the both =IT hand Harvard faculty committees as a full =ember.

The Broad has an independent board that =overs it and isn't really accountable operationally to Harvard or =IT.

Having said that, Eric is very different =han me, he's an accomplished scientist and teaches Biology 101 at =IT, etc.

My "thing" will probably more in =he translational Lab x Anti Disciplinary Space area where a non-profit =akes sense. We can put non-tenure track but interesting people and =rojects there and allow it to connect to the Media Lab so that both =ntities benefit.

I think we can figure out a =ay to use the Media Lab branding, which I think will be =mportant...

Would love to discuss this =ore.
