Maybe I read too much into things but I think what she was trying to say =owards the end was that she would love for banks to own this. Cause if =hey do all of her problems are solved for the most part..

In any case, a couple of things:
1) Shall we try to get her a white paper on security/future of =igital/virtual currencies? I think it would be a good idea just to stay =n their radar

2) So hmm, why Hong Kong? Maybe I'm not current on Treasury's view on =hina but I would have said Geneva/Basel/(maybe)Singapore.. or Beijing =ollowing 'go big or go home' :P

PS: as I said to Joi:
btw you pushing for less "Japan", me pushing for less privacy, jeffrey =or more regulation and treasury for more openness reminded me of:
