I took 5 days off with Michelle and a friend and we tried lots of SPORTS, and it surprised me-I did not hate it as much as I expected (nor did they succeed in killing me with it). Did lots of things I haven't in over a decade or more, long morning runs, tennis every day in 90 degree heat, trail-bike in up and down hills in the woods, river rowing and swimming, etc.

Unlike anything in last decade for me; shows that we need a real break in routine every so often...

Michelle and I are going to do another score reading at the Met opera- tickets go on same Monday and sell out right away. (it is a bargain, just $40, including the opera)...let me know if you are in town/want to join us:

Saturday, November 17, 10am

10am, followed by performance of Tosca

We did one of these before- Verdi's Requiem, and it was at the NYC-standard (world-class- these people are good at what they do; it also turned out to be the final conducting performance of James Levine's career, sadly).
