Subject: RE: Seagrape bushes=br>

Hello,

=p class="MsoNormal">

Right now what we have available are 25 gallon S=agrape bushes at 5-6ft tall. All the 6-7ft tall ones have been purchased. I=attached pictures of a few of them.

I have looked around as we need some for another job and I do=not think you are going to find any other seagrapes then the ones I have me=tioned. On the 65 gallon bushes I told you about, they have sold some so I w=uld have to check to see how many they have still if any. The only 45 gallo= I have found are 5ft tall so the 25 gallon would be a better purchase. =/u>

<=u>

I will remind you that th=re is a shortage of plant material and what is available right now might no= be available tomorrow. As you can see the sizes are going down it seems da=ly.

&n=sp;

If you have any o=her questions please let me know.

Thanks.

If you would please reply "Received" so I know you received this it would be greatly appreciated.

Hello,<=>

I just heard back on the 45 gallon seagrape bushes. The nursery t=at had them just stepped them up to 65 gallon pots a couple weeks ago. With=that said they also raised their price on them. They are 9-10ft tall and $5= more expensive.

<=u>

As another option I have (1,000) 45 gallon sea=rape trees like the ones I attached to this e-mail. These are 13-14ft tall p=anted with 6-7ft of clear trunk. If you planted one of these and two 2= gallon bushes like the one I attached on each side you would have a 14ft t=ll wall as the 25 gallon are 6ft tall. Let me know if that would work. <=u>

I also have (20-30) 100 gallon seagrape bushes that are 10ft tall by=10ft wide.

As our disclaimer states below. I cannot guarantee t=is material will be available in a couple days as there is a shortage of ma=erial in Florida right now.

If you have any questions please let=me know.
