Hello,

=ight now what we have available are 25 gallon Seagrape bushes at 5-6ft tall= All the 6-7ft tall ones have been purchased. I attached pictures of a few o= them.

&nbs=;

I have looked around=as we need some for another job and I do not think you are going to find an= other seagrapes then the ones I have mentioned. On the 65 gallon bushes I t=ld you about, they have sold some so I would have to check to see how many t=ey have still if any. The only 45 gallon I have found are 5ft tall so the 2= gallon would be a better purchase.

I will remind you that there is a shortage of plant material and wh=t is available right now might not be available tomorrow. As you can see th= sizes are going down it seems daily.

If you have any other questions please let me know.

Thanks.

I just heard back on the 45 gallon seagrape bushes. The nursery that had them just stepped them up to 65 gallon pots a couple weeks ago. With that said they also raised their price on them. They are 9-10ft tall and $50 more expensive.

As another option I have (1,000) 45 gallon seagrape trees like the ones I attached to this e-mail. These are 13-14ft tall planted with 6-7ft of clear trunk. If you planted one of these and two 25 gallon bushes like the one I attached on each side you would have a 14ft tall wall as the 25 gallon are 6ft tall. Let me know if that would work.
