My dear jeffrey, Just want to clarify:

1. Do you w=nt me looking for two bedrooms so that certain people can also spend time =here. For myself, my priority is to be cost efficient and can manage even =ith an unfurnished studio, and def with a one bedroom as long as its a dec=nt area.

So its up to you. And then if we are preparing for my guest(s= should it be a separate room or would you want us to share a room.

<=iv>Its all what you prefer as you know your plans. It makes a diff if I am=looking for just me or if I am looking to make someone in particular very =omfortable there so that they will spend time there.(Or they could possibl= use it as a base while sourcing furniture for you or something in Europe.=Morocco is a hop away, Paris, Italy. These places all have good architectu=al and design things to research.)

Up to you, as I say for=me myself I would save costs and get decent studio unfurnished and start w=th a desk, a matress and pretty trees.

2. A=r B and B is way more expensive than something like Rightmove and dealing =ith agents.

3. Should I just get something =or the first month of arrival and then do a proper look when I am there.=C2◆
