My dear jeffrey,=Just want to clarify:

1. Do you want me looking for two bedro=ms so that certain people can also spend time there.
For myself, my priori=y is to be cost efficient and can manage even with an unfurnished studio, =nd def with a one bedroom as long as its a decent area.

So its up to y=u. And then if we are preparing for my guest(s) should it be a separate ro=m or would you want us to share a room.

Its all what you prefer =s you know your plans. It makes a diff if I am looking for just me or if I=am looking to make someone in particular very comfortable there so that th=y will spend time there.(Or they could possibly use it as a base while sou=cing furniture for you or something in Europe. Morocco is a hop away, Pari=, Italy. These places all have good architectural and design things to res=search.)

Up to you, as I say for me myself I would save cost= and get decent studio unfurnished and start with a desk, a matress and pr=tty trees.

2. Air B and B is way more expen=ive than something like Rightmove and dealing with agents.

3. Should I just get something for the first month of arrival and then do a proper look when I am there.
