My dear jeffrey, Just=want to clarify:

1. Do you want me looking for two bedrooms s= that certain people can also spend time there. For myself, my priority is=to be cost efficient and can manage even with an unfurnished studio, and d=f with a one bedroom as long as its a decent area.

So its up to you. A=d then if we are preparing for my guest(s) should it be a separate room or=would you want us to share a room.

Its all what you prefer as yo= know your plans. It makes a diff if I am looking for just me or if I am l=oking to make someone in particular very comfortable there so that they wi=l spend time there.(Or they could possibly use it as a base while sourcing=furniture for you or something in Europe. Morocco is a hop away, Paris, It=ly. These places all have good architectural and design things to research=)

Up to you, as I say for me myself I would save costs and=get decent studio unfurnished and start with a desk, a matress and pretty =rees.

2. Air B and B is way more expensive =han something like Rightmove and dealing with agents.

3. Should I just get something for the first month of arrival an= then do a proper look when I am there.
