Dear Noam,<=span>

I apologize for the delay= multiple meetings have created a logjam in my schedule.

There is no issue with Ma= directly providing this information to Mr. Kahn, provided that everyone k=eps me in the loop on the communications, as I am your attorney. However, before I send Max an email to this effect, I want=d to note that Gene and I have discussed this, and since Mr. Kahn is unkno=n to both of us, we have both researched the internet to determine Mr. Kah=’s background, licensing, description and scope of services, etc. We found scant information about him; ju=t that he is CFO of a small company with an office in a residential sectio= of New York. We found no licensing information, he has no website d=scribing his services, background, the types of clients he represents, his track record, any indication of the scope of=his practice, personal or professional background, etc. Given this, =e advise you to proceed very cautiously in embarking on a new financial re=ationship and providing personal financial information, social security numbers, account numbers, etc. unless you hav= done very thorough due diligence to protect yourself and Valeria. P=ease let Gene and me know your thoughts. I hope you are not annoyed =y my and Gene’s cautious approach to this matter.

Gene, please feel free to=add your comments.

With regard to the financial analysis that John DeSimone has provided, I believe he is revising it in accordance with Nick's comments. I can see where this stands, and when he will be ready for a call with you to review the analysis, if you wish.

Best,

Deborah ♦?=A0
