I have been thinking about our chat. I have little doubt we could get a publisher interested in your story. But for me to do this, I would need standard assurances from you that you would not interfere in the reporting and in final writing -- as is the case with all bios of living subjects these days. Publishers would insist on this too in light of the donation thing. So, it's a big step.

I have always thought that this would be a great story to tell. But, the real question is: are you ready now to go through with it. If you are not, no worries -- life goes on. And I end up writing about catheters:)
