Dear Jeffrey Epstein --

How about tomorrow night for dinner? Or any other night this week, for that matter. I am not the victim of an overly crowded social schedule. I live in the 4eme, right next to Notre Dame. We might meet in my apartment and then go somewhere in the neighborhood. I am at 14 rue Chanoinesse. Or we might meet anywhere else in Paris, if you prefer. My phone number, by the way, is [REDACTED]

Just let me know. A vos ordres.

David and Jeffrey:

Let me virtually introduce the two of you, since you are both in Paris at the moment. Jeffrey: While David and I have only just recently renewed our acquaintance, I know from having spent a very interesting evening on stage with him a decade ago, and from having communicated with him and most recently written for his fascinating magazine Inference, that you would very much enjoy meeting and talking to him. He is very thoughtful, and has a mathematics background that I also think you would enjoy. And his sensibilities are rational and not PC at all! :) And as I told you on the phone, his daughter Claire wrote that article that you and I like so much. David: Jeffrey is a close friend and one of the most interesting and intelligent people I know, besides being completely inappropriate. :). He is also a kindred spirit. I think you two will find much of mutual interest to talk about, and will delight in each other's company. Jeffrey has a place in Paris he visits periodically, and he is there this week.

Enjoy.
