Sorry I misunderstood on the 000s. Gift tax r=turns have to report a number somewhere, so maybe statute doesn't =tart. But if you filed an income tax return for an entity with no income or expenses, Joe V assumes the statute would start. I= any event, we don't file returns that way. As I said, we wo=ld say "None" where appropriate.

i did not suggest you use the 000 method. =A0 Im sorry but i dont have the time . do yo= think if you filed a gift tax return and left everything blank the =tatue would run?

John Cook at EY said they would not sign a return th=t uses the 000s method. They said that there are too many footing pr=blems. Numbers won't tie to K-1s, W-2s, 1099s, etc. Also, if you only use it on part of the return, the various numbers on the=return would not match internally. He also pointed out that this met=od effectively truncates numbers; though I'm not sure what roundin= rules you use. E.g., 101,499 become 101? What happens to the other $499?

Joe V likes the idea of putting in 0's inste=d of blanks. He says he uses "none". He did no= understand why this would affect the statute of limitations.
