Dear Jeffrey,

I am not sure which would=be the best route to take and I just want to see what is best for you so t=at I can make my search more specific.

(Oh before=I forget [REDACTED] family have opened a beautiful food store,=restaurant, and wellness center just down the street where I have been sta=ing. I think its him -Bamford)

Back to apartments= I dont know whether to look at long term vs short term. Short term litera=ly add what seems like 40% on to the price for the exact same apartment yo= could get long term.

However the difficulty with long term is d=e to the fact that I do not have work proving that I earn four times the a=ount of the rent, and no UK benefactor (the person has to own property in =he UK) I would have to pay 6 months up front.

What I would do with long te=m is only take it with a 6 month break clause, so that you can leave after=6 months. There is also a deposit with long term which I think you get bac= at the end if you haven't caused damage.

Then there is also=the question of must I look for a space where [REDACTED] could visit because i= makes it a slightly different deal. But even if its one bedroom, I could =ive her my bed.

And then as always I know t=is is not your responsibility and you have given me the world already and = would understand if I had to sort it myself from a financial stand point.=/div>

Love and miss you
