Dear Jeffrey,

Thank you for being =ere for and with me, it just makes everything so much better and warmer in=ide of me.

I now know I cannot stay in Lond=n long term or indefinitely but it makes it more palatable to be here if I=know it is temporary and I am working with a plan towards where I want to =e. I don't know that I can work towards this without spending some tim= here because any route pursued will be a process.

I don't know what a residency program is but I am thinking it i= referring to me saying, I would do what it took to be where I wanted to b= even if that meant a masters?

So my options rema=n the same really:

- good
1. To do some work here while applying for a =rogram in the US, and then during that, sort out my situation for
 2. To try to develop myself to highly specialized level here (O-1)</=iv>
 3. To set up a business (E,2)

I have idea= for things I would like to set up but absolutely no knowledge of the busi=ess side which I have to learn somewhere, somehow and fast. I also wanted =o ask you if it would be ok to speak to Arda via skype or phone?

In the interim, Liaigre (London) reached out to me today an= would like to meet with me tomorrow.

My mo= is coming to London for December and half of January so that will make a =ery very big difference for that period of time. I am thinking to see what=Liaigre comes up with tomorrow and then plan South Africa?

Another issue here is finding a place and rent. Short term stays =eem to charge around 40% more monthly for the same property than long term=stays. Long term you can request a break clause at 6 months but if you bre=k before you would have to find someone to sublet from you.

paul suggested a short trip to =a and then maybe a full time in residence program somewhere . =s that what you want?
