Yesterday Apple only announced iPhones & Watch. iPads & MacBook Air replacements are yet to come.

The iPhone XS is an improvement over the iPhone X—faster=FaceID, dramatic camera improvements, faster CPU & 512GB storage option=E2 but it's not a lot to motivate upgrades from an existing iP=one X. I haven't seen anyone complain their X was too slow or di=n't have enough space.

The iPhon= XS Max takes the iPhone X and scales it up to the size of the iPhone 8 Plu=, so anyone that wants a giant 6.5-inch screen...

=he watch is still only good for notifications and fitness tracking. They =80 ve added "fall detection" so I'll recommend it=to a couple of my elderly clients, but if you didn't have use for t=e first one, the new one probably won't excite you either.

iOS 12 will be out soon, and is safe for everyone to i=stall—I've been running it for a month now.

MacOS 10.14 Mojave will be too, but I'd recommend wa=ting on that. There will be some big third-party compatibility issues on it at=first.

I'll have my recap newsletter=out by the end of the week.

Thank you,
