Yes..=that is the caveat from Alison, which I why I sent it to you in the =irst place.. Her email gave me pause.... interesting that you =ook her advice, even though you don't know her. :)

In any case, what I am =roposing is that we investigate with solicitors in Australia what their =ake on this is, likelihood of success, fallout, damage etc.. before =aking an informed decision about whether to move ahead. Doesn =9t that seem the most reasonable course rather than making somewhat =informed decisions ourselves? We don't have to go ahead, =ut it would be good to get their views, which is why I was drafting a =etter to send to them.

I =m focusing on the ASU thing.. but don't understand why you have =hanged your mind re lawsuit in australia. In any case, as one of =he things on my to do list this weekend I am drafting a letter that =ight be sent to solicitors in Australia to get their views, which I was =oing to send to you to look at. You encouraged this last week, =hich is why we started to look into it.
