It seems they keep playing the same game: delaying and pos=poning everything, like the information about the trust that Noam was enti=led to receive and never came. Now with the settlement the inf=rmation won't come anymore. And who knows if they are going to h=nor the settlement, since the same tactics have been used. It has be=n more than enough time to have the settlement written. But nothing =as come. They might as well just keep postponing it. I consider this=extremely disrespectful to Noam.

I wonder i= it shouldn't be given 48 hours to have the settlement or cancel the w=ole thing and go to court. This would be my position. But, of course= I prefer to solve in a more satisfactory and less stressful way for Noam.=C2◆

I think the statements will take a long time and when they will co=e, they will be fully of unacceptable demands, to have it done their way o= not have it.

Yes, we got information from the tax lawyer, via Vincent, th=t a tax-deductible distribution can be made from the Trust, though there a=e some open questions about how the IRS will deal with interest. I&#=9;ll forward it to you.

Vincent says he expects to =ear from Harry's lawyer in a day or two. Will keep you informed.
