The story is about Dr. K=m, of course, and his tenure at WBG. I've spoken to more than a doz=n people who worked closely with JYK. Your name has come up in many of thos= conversations.

Do=s it mean that you are a "major" part of the story? It does=not, though I hesitate to offer that assurance for the very simple reason t=at there is no settled definition of "major."

Is your name currently in the article?=It is, but as I've said before, we think very deeply about journali=tic ethics. That is only to say that we don't print everything we h=ar, nor print things we judge to be rumor or malicious innuendo.

I think the above makes our need to have a conversation more urgent. One suggestion is that, if we do delay the call, we do it so that my editor Sharon Weinberger is present. I trust her completely and believe that she can help us approach this in the most responsible and productive way possible.

Alexander thank you for your email.

I assume that I am not a major part of your story and that my name or any specifics about me will not be used in this story — you may be aware I mentor young women.

If my assumption is incorrect then we will need to delay our call tonight.

Thank you for getting back to me.

In short, the answer is yes, we can absolutely speak off the record.

But that requires some elaboration. For one, I have not met two people who agree exactly on what off the record is. My definition is as follows: that nothing from the conversation can be quoted or otherwise referenced in print unless it has been independently confirmed elsewhere (i.e., if you tell me that Lee Harvey Oswald shot JFK, I can print it because other sources say the same thing).

The above is how I've worked in the past, and it has allowed me,

Don't worry about recording. I can run a recorder on my end. But if you want to record for your own use, then by all means.

Dear [REDACTED], thank you for your call today. I very much look forward to speaking and want also to assure you that the team at Yahoo News is rigorously professional. If possible, I would love to talk at 7:30 PST tonight. Please let me know.

Thank you.
