Hi Jeffrey,

I've given y=ur interests in the stranger aspects of my PNSE research a lot of thought whil= here in India. You seem to get sued a lot, and I don't like documents s=owing up in discovery processes. I've written up my thoughts on what you'=e interested in, created an account on a secure email service, and had that account send an email to itself. That's about as safe as information tr=nsfer gets in our age. To read it, just log into the same account. I'll send you the username via Skype so the full=login isn't in one message or system. Please don't forward it or save a l=cal copy.

You can find it here:

<https://mail.protonmail.com/login>

Email Account Username: IN YOUR SKYPE CHAT FROM ME

Email Account Password: XmA2JD#$XqvqU%D^Bjvs8orGbK5enh65

When you've =viewed it enough, just delete the message. I'll come along later and close the account.

Much Love,

Jeffery

I've been thinking of you and your quest for=an experience that can lead to a mechanism. Qigong isn't surprising, g=ven Shin Lin's frustrations with his research in that area. What other=things have you tried to find it with? Any similar projects? I assume prob=bly the equally unimpressive parapsychology world, at a minimum. Also, who=were the 40 or so people you've tried so far? Ballpark is fine more th=n a list, though if you have kept a list that is okay to. I'm just try=ng to get a sense of the dry holes dotting your landscape so far.

Much Love,
Jeffery
