Trial date set for lawsuit against billionaire se= offender Epstein

Jane Musgrave Palm Beach Post Staff Writer<=u>

5:08 p.m Thursday, July 6, 2017 Central Palm B=ach County

WEST PALM BEACH

A trial that promises to offer the first public airi=g of convicted sex offender Jeffrey Epstein's activities with teen=ge girls at his Palm Beach mansion is to be held in December, a Palm Beach=County circuit judge agreed Thursday.

The malicious prosecution lawsuit that attorney Brad=ey Edwards filed against the Palm Beach billionaire has been on hold for y=ars while various appeals were filed. With the issues resolved by the Flor=da Supreme Court last month, Circuit Judge Donald Hafele said the jury trial should begin Dec. 5.=/p>

While attorney Jack Scarola, who represents Edwards,=had put President Donald Trump on the witness list, he has said he won =80 t need Epstein's fellow part-time Palm Beacher to prove his c=se. The legal hurdles he would face to try to force a sitting president to take the witness stand are unnecessary, he said.=/u>

"We can prove our case without Donald Trump=E2 s testimony," Scarola said in May.

Scarola claims Epstein sued Edwards in 2009 to punis= him for representing roughly a half-dozen women against Epstein. The wome= claimed Epstein paid them for sexually charged massages at his mansion wh=n some were as young as 14. Epstein eventually dropped his lawsuit against Edwards, but the state Supreme Cour= recently ruled Edwards could still pursue the 64-year-old politically-con=ected money manager for malicious prosecution.

As part of a plea deal in 2008, Epstein settled the =awsuits that more than two dozen young women, including Edwards' c=ients, had filed against him. The settlement agreements were confidential.=u>

When he agreed to plea guilty to charges of solicita=ion of prostitution and soliciting minors to engage in prostitution, he al=o agreed not to contest the women's claims. In what Edwards and ot=ers have described as a "sweetheart deal," Epstein served 13 months of an 18-month sentence. He was allowed to leave =he Palm Beach County jail during the day to work, but he has been forced t= register as a sexual offender.

That deal is the subject of a separate lawsuit now p=nding against the U.S. government in federal court. Edwards claims the U.S= Attorney's Office violated the federal Crime Victims Rights Act b= signing off on the deal, which allowed Epstein to plead guilty to minor charges in Palm Beach County Circuit Court. In ex=hange, federal prosecutors said they wouldn't pursue charges again=t him.

In court papers, federal prosecutors recently disput=d Edwards' claims, insisting they kept victim's informed a= the nonprosecution agreement took shape. They said many of the victims re=used to testify. They claimed they negotiated the deal because they wanted to assure that the traumatized young women receiv=d money to rebuild their lives and that Epstein would be forever branded a=sex offender to protect other young women.

Edwards is to file his response to their claims by t=e end of the month.

Details of Epstein's lifestyle were expected to be divulged in a federal courtroom in New York City in May. But on the eve of trial, the defamation suit Edwards filed against Epstein's longtime friend, British socialite Ghislaine Maxwell, was settled. The terms are confidential.

Edwards filed the suit on behalf of [REDACTED] [REDACTED] = who previously came out of hiding to claim that in addition to abusing her, Epstein let his high-placed friends use her as a sex toy. The men [REDACTED] = identified, who denied the allegations, included former President Bill Clinton and Great Britain's Prince Andrew, both regular guests on Epstein's jet. When Maxwell called [REDACTED] claims "obvious lies," Edwards sued her.

While all the dozens of other lawsuits Epstein has filed have been settled, Scarola vows the malicious prosecution one will go to trial.
