Subject: Re: Wool substitute: Timing for samples of selected silk treated

Yes I know....

it has to be worsted yarn or silk and i will hopefully get those before the long weekend. Its useless giving you untreated samples because each product reacts differently to the chemical Marc

Jeffrey,

The nylon samples look pretty drab and are very difficult to treat.

This Italian velour carpet, (photo attached) is woven in NZ yarn and is highly durable and easily fire-proofed. It lacks the sheen though

By next Friday, I am hoping to have both the silk and the worsted yarn sample to you with the treatment applied, so you see the difference and can make an informed decision

Both the silk and the wool will take only 6 weeks to produce and have in the US after you decide, so I think we will be ok with time

Would you like me to send up the Italian velour?

Marc
