I don't want this to be any trouble for you, and if all your meetings cancelled in New York, then of course there is no reason for you to come back, I totally understand. I will just need to figure out what to do depending on how long you are planning to stay there.

I did it once when blueberry was smaller, and remember how tough it was. Now they both are big and can barely move in the small airline approved carrier, because of the restricted carrier size. And it would be 7-8 hours of travel including the boat in a heat. I just can't torture them time that, it breaks my heart... Is there any chance you might come back to NY? If not, I have to think of who to leave them with...
