Had pretty bad period craps for four hours (even after I took 4 pills of Advil) at night, then felt worse and vomitted twice (this never happens to me. After that, I felt a little better. Felt as bad as when I had the kidney stone (I thought these were the usual period cramps and they would go away when I took Advil). Feeling better today. Never had such bad cramps before and never even felt nauseous during the period. Do you think it might be something serious? I hope it doesn't happen again tonight (I felt sick during the day yesterday and it started after 830pm when I was preparing to go to bed)
