Jeffrey,

I suggest that we move forward with the detailed contract as presented yesterday as it contains 98% (mathematical deduction) of your requested desires.

The remaining 2% can be addressed in a change order for your review as they likely require additional thought, input and design (which you will undoubtedly orchestrate/ influence.)

Further, you consistently present interesting new ideas / changes (example: "do we cover the divan cabinets so it looks more like house sofa?" ) that need to be addressed and the work scope / related costs updated.

Assuming that you agree we have 98% covered coupled with the fact that we are six or less days away from input (not to mention that although we have a strong direction, the "specific" leather, suede, carpet, fabrics have not been identified) I humbly suggest you employ an ink-filled writing instrument and sign the contract so that we can open a work order Monday morning as we need to start the engineering for the weight and balance so that we can prepare the aircraft for flight to Savannah for paint.

P.S. I find covering the divan end arm cabinets to look more like a sofa to be a very interesting idea that deserves serious consideration.

As always, please do not hesitate to call me with any questions you may have.

Thank you.

Best Regards,

Eric

Jeffrey,

Attached is our revised proposal which reflects many of the additional items you have requested.

However, it does NOT include some of the items discussed (Vacant door sign on lav/cabin door, removing peep hole in door, reworking sidewall tables, etc...)

We will have to look at these items after the aircraft comes in and provide you with a change order for your review.

Additionally, I have changed the materials on the cabin chairs and divans to reflect leather and suede as well as adjusted the pricing downward to reflect the new material costs. I also changed the material cost on the carpet.

Thank you for this opportunity.

Best Regards,

Eric
