I would physically have to see the upper galley area to identify the angles.

Best Regards,

Eric

Never thought of that but if the inside was white might be ok?

A roll down (tambour) door like the old desks won't work here. When the "door" is in the up position, the slotted door pieces would conceal / be onboard of the white outboard area. Additionally, I believe the angle of the area may be too severe for the door to work smoothly.
