Hi Jeffrey,

This whole thing has had me super stressed out and it's gone on for longer than it should have. I've been extremely patient and extremely broke. This is the second year. I have lost $3,000 in tax refunds I normally get back, because [REDACTED] is working. Which I know we talked about last time. It was never the arrangement. And she worked again this year and we owe $781. Yet again I won't get anything back. I normally get money for claiming my mom because I take care of her and I won't see any of that money either. I'm struggling. I have no savings for emergencies. I cut out one of my work days last year and two this year in hopes I'd get more money back since I got nothing last year and so I could get affordable health insurance which now I will get neither. I also need to apply to go to school. I've held off on it for four years because I won't qualify for financial aid in my current position. My life is at a standstill I want to get an annulment if this isn't resolved soon. I feel like my whole life has been put on hold and it's in ruins. I care to much about helping people I've currently forgotten to help myself and look after my future as well. I haven't heard from you at all and I have started to get very impatient over everything.
