My dear Jeffrey

I u=derstand you so well. There is no need to be snobbish about the work you h=ve to do, especially at the beginning when one just starts. I think we sho=ld be grateful enough for the opportunity to have a job and not complain a=t tasks once at the job...

I a= also an assistant/intern in bank now regardless of law degrees, and espec=ally the Paris bar which I had to sweat for for thousands of hours. <=div>

I j=st wanted to diversify my knowledge, to learn finance after I met you, did=my internship in Singapore in banking finance law, tried out HSBC private =ank in Monaco, and to do smth else than drafting memos....I work on same s=uff as my 19-20 year old peers in this bank who never earned any law or univer=ity degrees...and am happy to have a job at all until this summer and lear=.

Any=ay, I would be super happy to be your assistant and to learn from you. You=know me already and I would totally not disappoint you with my job skills.=C2◆

I w=uld love to learn from you first of all and help you, and the banking or l=gal career can wait.

If =ou want someone unknown, tell me your dates in NY and Paris, and I will se=d you people. But need concrete job descriptions too...

Kind regards,

What happened with Alice, Yustina, the ladies you met in =Y, why they didn't become your assistants ?

Jeffrey, you have so many business things going on and so=many gorgeous ladies around you, I just try to understand what for you nee= just new normal girls to meet...need to be clear with your intentions wha= for do I look in the candidates..for me it would be a waste of time to e-m=et random men while life is so beautiful and without all new people coming=in it by dozens a day...since I imagine I'm not the only one who wishe= to find you a perfect match
