When chosen years ago to do the unavailable Carl Reiner's role with Mel Brooks on the still fondly recalled, improvised Ballantine Beer commercials of yesteryear...

(Letters to the agency: "What can we do? The commercials are great! But the beer tastes like piss.") I insisted in our first improv session in my role as questioner that Mel, as "The 2500-Year Old Brewmaster" finally actually taste the beer we were lauding. He did.

When I asked for his reaction, Mel exploded with, 'My tongue just threw a party for my mouth!'

That's what happened again yesterday with the coq au vin.

Incroyable!
