yes, freeman dyson says that too.. That may be true at some =evel, and indeed during a period of the earth's history when =here was more CO2 (hundreds of millions of years ago), there were very =arge plants of certain types... but what does this imply, really? =nbsp;more corn in the arctic? do we need more corn in the arctic? =nbsp;He has cherry picked data, the typical act of those who believe =he answer before they ask the question.
